

It seems only appropriate that during the month of January, the children will be learning about Winter in Science Class. We will talk about how water freezes and turns into ice, and then watch as it melts back to its original state. The 4's will be learning how to "predict" what might happen and "observe" what actually happens in an experiment. We will make it snow in our class and study snowflakes.